

This Vermont Bed-And-Breakfast is The Perfect Autumn Getaway

October 23, 2018

Text by Katie Wood

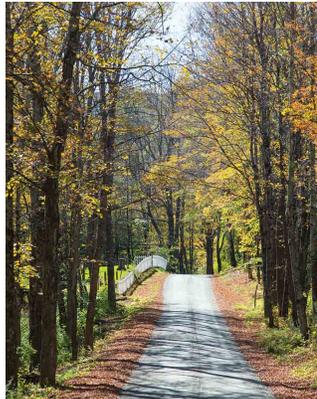

When it comes to a cottage stay in New England, charming bed-and-breakfasts are the way to go. Enjoy a one-of-a-kind location as well as the travel insight and instant friendship of your local innkeeper. Such is the case at the Green River Bridge House in a picturesque village just outside the town of Brattleboro, Vermont.

The welcoming yellow house, built in 1830, finds its home in a dreamlike setting—nestled on a winding country road, with an iconic covered bridge and the babbling Green River nearby. Originally the Green River Post Office, the historic property found a new life and fresh energy when innkeeper Joan Seymour bought and restored the place 18 years ago. A true labor of love, the completed home is beautifully designed for a cozy getaway full of cottage style. Joan is host to guests from around the world—which means that sharing memorable tales and interesting stories together while enjoying her delicious homemade breakfast at the dining room's Chippendale table overlooking the river simply cannot be missed.

As you venture out to explore Vermont's charm-filled villages, embrace the crisp autumn air and incredible vistas. With forests covering three-fourths of the state, Vermont boasts the highest percentage of vibrant maple trees in the country—making it an extra-sweet treat for touring via scenic byways or perhaps just enjoying a morning hike outdoors. And though beautiful year-round, the Green Mountain State truly bursts to life in the fall months with fiery reds, oranges, and yellows.

While touring the idyllic countryside, there are countless stops to enjoy along the way. From historic roadside landmarks and quaint downtown storefronts to local artisanal creameries and world-famous ice cream shops, Vermont has something for history buffs, foodies, and nearly everyone in between.

For more travel inspiration plus fall decorating ideas to create the coziest home, click below to get your copy of Autumn 2018!